

ADULT PSYCHOANALYTIC PSYCHOTHERAPY PROGRAM

About the Program

The Adult Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy Program (APP) is sponsored by the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis, one of the largest and most renowned of its kind in the United States. Founded in 1932, The Institute is internationally recognized as a leading center for education, training and research in psychoanalysis and psychodynamically informed education and treatment models. The Institute maintains contacts and relationships with many institutions, national and regional, and considers local community service to be an additional important component of its mission.

An intensive, clinically oriented two-year certificate-granting program.

The program's educational goals are to apply psychodynamic principles to clarify clinical problems, define therapeutic goals and guide interventions in the clinician's practice of psychotherapy. Many practicing clinicians and recent graduates experience the need for post-graduate education to deepen theoretical understanding and sharpen clinical skills. These skills can be applied in the private practice as well as other settings. Didactic seminars and individual clinical supervision are the avenues through which these educational goals are achieved.

"This is an excellent program. It combines both psychoanalytic theory and practical clinical experience that has expanded and strengthened my abilities as a psychotherapist. The personal supervision outside of class is invaluable, and the instructors in class are enthusiastic and extremely knowledgeable. The most surprising and rewarding aspect has been the camaraderie and support of my fellow students. I would highly recommend this program to any mental health professional who does psychotherapy."

- Brett C. Plyer, MD
